About Programme

Sub-prime led financial crises shook economies across the globe right from January, 2007 with US being worst hit, followed by EU nations. Theory of decoupled economies had to be discounted as coupling effect made economies in rest of the world and developing economies also immensely suffering. Global economies, at large, suffered an unprecedented setback post September, 2008 after fall out of Lehman Brothers, Citibank, Merrill Lynch, Bank of America, AIG etc. with over 1.5 Trillion USD wiping off. US Federal Government had to come to the rescue with bailout package of over 900 Billion towards working capital requirements.

Indian economy also had its share of impact but not that serious and grave as that of US and EU where these economies faced recession/recessionary trend and mounting pressure on the performance.

Global Economy is predicted to recover during the ensuing year as per various reports of economic survey. Ideas change the world while some built on change. On this subject, there are two schools of thoughts with respect to the Indian situations. One school is of the view that there was no noticeable recession in our country. The other school opined that it was global effect on our economy which we could not manage properly.

India is poised to post strong growth in the coming years. However, it is a fact that Indian economy has been adversely affected by the global impact. Revival is tremendous task before us and the same is to be handled. The present situation is to be treated as an opportunity rather than hindrance. With this background we have to initiate efforts to achieve GDP at desired rate. Business growth depends upon organizational structure, management remuneration and business lead steps to ensure a reasonable push in demand and more thrust on development of infrastructure sector, conducive to monetary and fiscal policies.

Growth of economy and industry should not be complacent. It requires value addition. Unless this is created, the present growth cycle will not be able to cope up with sustainable recession killer. The present programme is to focus on the strategies and challenges to be adopted by our professionals.

Noida Management Association
